PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE-by Eileen Hochstadt

It is from Rabbi Noah Weinberg. He was the dean and founder of Aish HaTorah. For 50 years, his visionary educational programs brought hundreds of thousands of Jews closer to their heritage. I would like to share a piece from Aish.com where Rabbi Noah Weinberg of Blessed Memory delves into essential ways to achieve success in every facet of your life. He presents 48 ways, but I am only covering one today:

Way # 14 Written Instructions for Living

Torah is not an arcane text of the ancient world. It is the essence of Judaism, which is the essence of ourselves.

The Jewish people have a set of "written instructions for living" - the Bible, and "oral instructions for living" - the Talmud. Jewish wisdom is incomprehensible unless both parts are working together.

Way #14 is "b'mikreh," the written instructions. The Bible has three parts, totaling 24 books:

Torah - The Five Books of Moses, revealed to the Jewish people by G-d at Mount Sinai.

Prophets - G-d spoke to various prophets (e.g. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel) who transmitted messages strengthening the Jewish commitment to Torah.

Writings - The Writings (e.g. Proverbs, Psalms, Esther) emphasize G-d's message in a poetic style.

The Bible is the all-time bestseller and has made an enormous impact on Western civilization. Everyone should study the Bible at least once in a lifetime.

"All men have an inalienable right" - straight from the Bible. "Love your neighbor" - the Bible. Isaiah's vision of peace adorns the United Nations. The biblical sanction to "proclaim freedom throughout the land" is engraved on the Liberty Bell.

You don't need to accept the existence of G-d to learn these basic lessons. Whether interpersonal relationships, self-awareness, community relations, or environmental concerns - Torah is the ultimate "owner's manual."

On a deeper level, Jewish tradition says that Torah is the "blueprint for creation." Everything in life can be found in Torah... if you ask the right questions and possess the right set of tools.

Intergalactic Communication

Imagine you received a message from outer space. You might not fully understand its meaning, but you are fascinated. You will study every word and try to decode it.

Torah is the word of G-d, communicated to the Jewish people at Mount Sinai. If a piece of Torah doesn't seem to make sense, don't pass it off as irrelevant. Keep asking, searching, delving.

Look deeper into what each piece of Torah is telling you. All the stories and commandments are philosophical messages waiting to be revealed by the intellectually active mind. The Flood, the Tower of Babel, the splitting of the Red Sea - all contain the deepest wisdom for living. Even dates, names, numbers, events, and lineage all teach us something. The message is often between the lines. And when the message seems obvious, there's more below the surface. Let's take an example. In Genesis chapter 18, Abraham is in the middle of conversing with G-d. Then three strangers pass by, and Abraham immediately runs to serve them. At this point, the alert reader should question: Why would Abraham stop talking to G-d in order to help strangers? It doesn't make sense. Even an atheist would admit that talking to G-d is the ultimate experience! From here we learn a profound spiritual lesson: Even more important than talking to G-d, is to be like G-d. What does it mean to "be like Him"?

G-d created the world for our pleasure. Everything he placed here - fruit, hands, love - are manifestations of His kindness. This world is one big hospitality inn. So, when you take the role of host, of serving your fellow man, you are like G-d. Abraham was wealthy and famous, yet it was not beneath him to serve strangers. He understood the lesson.

Read the Bible intelligently. It is the guiding force of Jewish achievement, as fresh today as it was 3,500 years ago. Don't discount its value without first trying to study it. Respect the Bible. It is a hidden treasure, a special message from G-d.

A Message From Ron Becker

Dear friends, time is flying by! We have spent an entire month enjoying each other's company as we celebrated all of the Holy Days from Selichot through Simchat Torah with numerous holiday and festival days in between with days of prayer and meals together at the synagogue and by the river. Thanks to all who volunteered time and funds to make it all possible. Now we are entering the fall/winter season with much to be thankful for and a very full calendar of activities. I encourage you all to set aside some time to join us as we work to better our synagogue family and the community around us by attending religious services as we will be reading and studying the entire book of Genesis (Bereshit) throughout this season, celebrating holidays and personal/family lifecycle milestones, and volunteering to help those in need throughout our region.

The Original

If you want to understand the Bible, you might need to learn Hebrew. There are things you will be missing if you choose not to and in order to get the full meaning in translation, learning the language will help.

For example, the Torah uses 10 different names for G-d. Each "name" refers to an aspect of G-d's essence: all-knowing, all-powerful, prime mover, merciful, etc. But in English, these names are all translated the same, and much of the depth is lost.

Worse yet, biblical translation promotes misconceptions. For example, you'll read a translation and come across the word "sin." Uh-oh. Sin, evil, punishment. But the Hebrew word Chet does not mean sin at all. Chet appears in the Bible in reference to an arrow which missed the target. There is nothing inherently "bad" about the arrow (or the archer). Rather, a mistake was made - due to a lack of focus, concentration, or skill. From here we learn that human beings are essentially good. Nobody wants to sin. We may occasionally make a mistake, lose focus, and miss the target. But in essence we want to do good. This is a great lesson in self-esteem. Simply adjust your aim and try again! In translation, the message is lost. In fact, entire religions have arose based on mistranslations. Try and get it straight. Think about learning Hebrew.

Preconceived Notions

I once came across a magazine profiling a group of hippies who spent the day reading the biblical "Song of Songs." "Song of Songs" is written in the form of a poem, a love song between a man and a woman, symbolizing the relationship between the Almighty and humanity. The message is so deep and beautiful that the Jewish people call this book the "holy of holies." On the commune, they had an experience where the men recited the man's lines, and the women recited the woman's lines. The magazine reports that they read through "Song of Songs" and had a fantastic experience. Afterward, the women proclaimed that they finally found a portion of the Bible written by a woman, because no man could ever understand a woman's feelings so deeply and state them so powerfully. In other words, they concluded that only a hermaphrodite could have edited the Bible. But G-d? No, that's inconceivable.

Unfortunately, Bible critics usually come from a preconceived position, and when the Bible doesn't fit those parameters, they are forced to make far-fetched conclusions. They don't seriously consider the idea of Torah's divine authorship, of "national revelation."

Yet it is an unbroken Jewish tradition that 3 million men, women and children stood at Mount Sinai and heard the Torah directly from G-d. And in the 3,300 years since, no other religion has ever made such a claim - because it is impossible to fabricate.

Nature & Miracles

Some critics have trouble accepting the idea of divine intervention. For them, all the biblical phenomena need to be explained in terms of nature. A book called "World in Collision," for example, explains the splitting of the Red Sea like this: A tremendous comet approached earth at the time the Egyptians were chasing the Jews. At that precise moment, the comet was in position to tear the Red Sea apart by the force of gravity, leaving dry land between two walls of the sea. The Jews entered the sea, and sure enough, the Egyptians followed. Luckily, the Jews came out the other side just as the comet passed, and the water returned, drowning the Egyptians. Simple, right? You don't need G-d. How does this book explain the manna bread that the Jews collected every morning for 40 years in the desert? After the comet passed, particles of petroleum remained in the higher atmosphere. It eventually burned off and mixed with the dew. The falling dew combined with a particular micro-bacterium that digests petroleum products and converts it into protein. Thus, explains how every morning, for 40 years, a nation of Jews picked up manna bread - "dew containing predigested protein." On Fridays, there was a double portion, but he doesn't explain that... These explanations are missing the point. Torah isn't a history book, a physics book, or a storybook. Rather, it is Torat Chaim - literally "instructions for living." Every word, every phrase contains a message how to maximize pleasure in life. Look for the deeper message - the wisdom within - and you will reap immense rewards.

The Time Is Now

The first sentence a Jewish child is taught is "Torah tziva lanu Moshe, morasha kehilat Yaakov" - "Torah was commanded to us through Moses and is the inheritance of every Jew." Torah was meant for everybody. It is not the exclusive domain of some priestly class. Rather, it is a living, breathing document - the lifeblood of our Jewish nation. We are always required to involve ourselves in its study and practice. As it says, "You shall think about it day and night" (Joshua 1:8). Your academic education may have ended, but there may come a point where you are as good a "professional" as you need to be. But learning Torah starts at a young age and continues for a lifetime. As you mature and your awareness of reality increases, so will your understanding of concepts you thought you once knew well.

Every Jew is supposed to review the weekly Torah portion three times and then hear it again in the synagogue on Shabbat. We review, ask questions, discuss the topics. "What did you see, what was difficult, what didn't you understand?" After learning a piece of Torah, organize it so it's at your fingertips. For example, the Five Books of Moses are organized into 54 weekly portions and 674 chapters. After learning one chapter, pause and assign a code word or phrase to the chapter. You'll have a handy device to recall the wisdom it contains. Some people use the excuse, "I'm too old to begin learning." But the Talmudic scholar Rebbe Akiva didn't even learn the Aleph-Bet until he was age 40. This is the same Rebbe Akiva who became the greatest sage of his generation with 24,000 students!

Some people are hesitant to learn Torah because they can't imagine ever becoming a scholar, so therefore "why even get started?" This is faulty thinking. Every drop of Torah study is precious and eternal.

Tree of Life

There are two ways to acquire wisdom: through life experience, or through learning Torah. Judaism says it's better to get wisdom through Torah. Why? Because even though you can learn from experience, there's a negative residual effect. True, a woman who goes through a series of failed relationships will eventually learn what's important in a husband. But if she'd first studied wisdom, she'd have saved a lot of needless headaches.

We learn this lesson from the Garden of Eden. Here is a story that sounds like a real fairytale: two trees in the middle of the garden, and G-d instructs Adam that the Tree of Life (symbolizing the attainment of wisdom through Torah) is made to be eaten, whereas the Tree of Knowledge (symbolizing wisdom through experience) is better avoided. Adam's mistake? He eats from the Tree of Knowledge.

We don't have the patience to get to know ourselves and we want to learn from experience. Many people say: "After I make money, when my business is self-sustaining, then I'll take time out to learn Torah. But I need to experience life a little first." Three divorces later... Do not say: "When I have free time, I will study," for perhaps you will never have time. Realistically, once you're promoted to VP of the firm, do you expect to have more free time, or less free time?

The Torah is a "tree of life" for those who grasp it. When we study Torah, we are not studying an abstract and arcane text of the ancient world. We are in fact discovering the essence of ourselves.

Why is "Written Instructions" a Way to Wisdom?

Read the Bible from beginning to end. If you haven't yet learned Hebrew, buy an authentic Jewish translation. (Recommended: ArtScroll's "Stone Chumash")

Learn Torah. Discover G-d's instructions for living. Don't wait until your life is almost over.

Understand Torah. It's the book that changed the world. Ask questions until you know the message in detail.

Correlate any differences and resolve them. There are no "unintentional" discrepancies in Torah. Look in the book and you will find it.

Organize it. Wisdom is only useful when it's at your fingertips. Torah should be your encyclopedia, almanac and index to living.

Review Torah, to remember. You wouldn't head out on the open road without a map. When going through life, don't leave the Torah behind.

Integrate Torah. Make the ideas part of your reality. Rebbe Akiva said that a Jew without Torah is like a fish without water.

Update it. Renew Torah wisdom as your life situation changes. Don't "honor your parents" at age 25 the same way you did at age five.

Upgrade it. The first paragraph of the "Shema" contains 48 words, corresponding to the 48 Ways. Torah wisdom is infinitely vast. Always delve one level deeper.

Respectfully Submitted,
Eileen M Hochstadt
